

I support the creation of rules that create a mobile device equivalent to the National No-Call Lists currently regulating telemarketers on land line phones. SPAM and unauthorized telemarketing calls to mobile phone and other mobile communication devices poses a substantial financial burden on the reciever in the form of air time charges and electronic storage. Since the receiver has no control over the amount, size or appropriateness of the content of these messages, this type of marketing is little more than electronic harassment. I beleive a "no call" type list, properly enforced, presents the best method of protecting the mobile phone public from these unsolicited intrusions. Thank You
